Casa Patino is an architecture and interior design project for a family home in Quinta Patino. The starting point was the client's references: spaces of timeless elegance, welcoming and with a strong sense of hospitality. The concept draws on the poem "Evohé Bakkhos" by Sophia de Mello Breyner Andresen and the taste of sun and resin it evokes. From it comes a warm, enveloping palette: walnut ceilings and furniture, pale softly veined marble, classic white mouldings and brass-framed glazing that divides the spaces without closing them, letting light flow through the house.
